AFYA SYRIAN CHILDREN'S APPEAL

We all want to help and are frustrated by our seeming inability to impact the Syrian refugee crisis but here is a way for you to help. As the Syrian War enters its 6th year, the refugee crisis continues to be disastrous with millions of lives lost. Tens of millions of people have fled their homes, are displaced within Syria or are seeking refuge. This is quite simply the worst refugee crisis the world has witnessed since World War II.

Afya's Solution: By partnering with the IDF and US based Syrian NGOs, Afya can ship 40-foot containers of medical supplies to Syrian health centers. We need to raise funds to make this happen! We have the supplies that match the specific requests and are ready to begin shipping. Syrians are seeking care in camps and health centers void of supplies. The IDF has offered its help and logistic support.

This collaboration is the essence of building communities with a singular intent abroad-to stand up and do something about the suffering of others. It involves the best that each party has to offer and by working together we can make a sweeping change in what health care delivery looks like to refugees living with trauma and without a country to call home.

ACT NOW to help us make this collaboration and delivery of supplies possible. Please share this message and request for support with your community of friends and family.

"TAKE GREAT CARE" - ON THE CAREER OF DR. CAROL S. KELLY

By Karen VanderVen, Ph.D., Professor Emerita Department of Psychology in Education University of Pittsburgh

Over the years those of us who corresponded with Carl Kelly noted that she signed off by saying "Take Great Care". Little did she know that after her passing on February 10, 2017, it would be noted that this phrase could serve as a metaphor for her outstanding career in child and youth work. Carl's dedicated and generous involvement in the field for many years touched many.

Like a number of major figures in the field of child and youth care, Carl was a native of Ohio. She earned a B. S. degree from Ohio State University in 1961, an MS from the University of Nevada in '62, and an Ed.D. from UCLA.

She began her teaching career at California State University-Northridge in 1969 in the College of Human Development Department of Child and Adolescent Development, retiring as Professor Emeritus in 2007.

Martha Mattingly and I first met Carl some decades ago - maybe 1975- at one of those historical conferences in Washington, D.C. where we child care people quickly discovered each other. Carl as I had been associated at the time (if I recall correctly) with a Child Mental Health Specialist program founded by Dr. Norbert Rieger, at a state mental hospital in California. We became friendly associates and we enjoyed our commonalities and meetings at dozens of child care events for decades thereafter. My collection of photographs from my own career in the field contains probably several dozen of Carl and our other colleagues having dinner together - all over the world. In 1999 as I recall, on our way to a conference in Toronto, Carl, Shirley Atkins, Martha Mattingly, Sr. Madeleine Rybicki and myself all went to Niagara Falls. I have the photographs of us in rain ponchos to prove it! She was an active participant in the "Almost Midnight" basketball event at the Albert Trieschman conference in 1996. Carl was full of fun and high spirits and made every conference lively.

Competencies In Review

COMPETENCY DOMAIN: PROFESSIONAL PRACTICE

By James Freeman

Child and Youth Care (CYC) is a different kind of profession. We seek to minimize forms of professional 'distance' and avoid positioning ourselves as an 'expert' on someone's life. Rather we come alongside, meet young people where they are, and support them in finding the next step in their own journey of life.

Being a growing CYC professional means that we have an awareness of the profession, manage our own professional behavior (e.g. staying current, reflecting on our own practice, participate in ongoing training) as well as personal development and taking care of ourselves. It also means we have a commitment to ethical practice, are aware of the laws that affect our practice setting, and engage in advocacy for the youth we work alongside.

Personal and professional growth doesn't happen without intention planning and action. Practitioners who want to grow take initiative for their own learning. They seek out feedback and opportunities to stretch the boundaries of their own limits.

Being a competent professional is not limiting, but empowering to own own style and personality as we integrate the values and ethics of the field. It involves learning about ourselves and equips us to make decisions where there are not precedents or clear boundaries.

What are you doing in this next year to develop your professional knowledge and skills?

President's Perspective

PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

Jody Rhodes

Welcome ACYCP members and friends to this spring edition of the CYC-Advocate. This issue has a significant amount of information on the history of the ACYCP. In 2017, we are 40 years STRONG. I have been refraining from saying 40 years old- with good reason. As you read the past president's perspectives in the "Where Are They Now" section that the CYC Advocate editor and ACYCP board member Michael Mitchell has put together, you will see how much we have accomplished and been through the last 40 years. I feel like the best is yet to come for the ACYCP. I have been involved with the organization for only about the past 10 years, so I'm a relative newcomer. We have much to be excited about coming on the horizon.

We invite you to join us in Milwaukee, WI on Wednesday, May 31st in a toast to our first 40 years, as we plan for the next 40!

Where Are They Now?

PAST PRESIDENTS REFLECT ON 40 YEARS OF PROGRESS

[Editor's Note]: While many people have labored long and hard to bring ACYCP to its current status as the premier advocacy organization for child and youth care workers, it's usually the president who has led the charge. Here are their perspectives on the historical evolution of the organization during their respective tenures. Since much of this is based on oral history and dusty recollections, there may be a few inconsistencies and inaccuracies; however these narratives do capture the feeling of the times and the events which shaped the course of the organization to the present day. The current President is Jody Rhodes, who took over in 2016.

RALPH KELLY, 1977-1981

Ralph Kelly was elected the first president of the National Organization of Child Care Worker Associations (NOCCWA), based on his reputation as head of the New York state association of about 1,000 child and youth care workers. NOCCWA grew out of informal conversations between attendees at the annual ORTHO psychiatry conference in 1976. These conferences often attracted 10-15,000 attendees. Many of these conversations involved Albert Trieschman's book, The Other 23 Hours, a landmark work in child psychotherapy and the importance of the front-line direct-care provider. This forerunner to ACYCP was an organization of state associations, not individuals. Some of the early members were Oregon, Delaware Valley, Pennsylvania (these two later merged), Maryland, Wisconsin, Ohio and Texas. Ralph had the distinction of being one of the first graduates from the child and youth care master's program at the University of Pittsburg, where he worked closely with Martha Mattingly and Karen Vander Ven. It was expected that about 50 people would show up for the first planning meeting in Chicago in 1977, which also attracted a delegations from Texas and Canada. Based on this it was decided to make NOCCWA an international body. In actuality, over 150 people attended. At this meeting by-laws were passed, officers elected, Shortly after this Ralph was asked to testify before the U.S. Congress on institution child abuse, but was unable to do so at the last minute, so Norman Powell (as vice-president) filled in. Testimony at these hearings, recorded in the Congressional Record, determined that the abuse was rife in residential facilities, because of poor direct-care worker training and working condition, including pay. In 1977 NOCCWA also received its 501c3 tax-exempt authorization. Thus was born the idea of certification for child and youth care workers. While NOCCWA met every year, it was decided to have an international conference every three years; the first one being in Victoria, British Columbia in 1978. This was coordinated by Tony Maciocia, who was entrusted with them for many years thereafter. During Ralph's tenure, it was decided to create a journal on youth and child care practice, on which Mark Krueger was very active. Ralph served a term of four years, at which time he was succeeded by Norman Powell.

NORMAN POWELL, 1981-1985

Norman was one of the early founders of the national Organization of Child Care Worker Associations NOCCWA (see Ralph Kelly) as the "dialogue coordinator" and later its first vice-president. He was elected president in 1981 and served until 1985. Starting out in his hometown of Washington, D.C., where he worked in residential treatment, he became the Director of the Division of Family Services for Catholic Charities of the Arch Diocese of Baltimore, Maryland. It was during this time that he met Ralph, who helped him start a state child and youth care worker association in that state. In addition to helping establish the Youth Work Journal, spearheaded by Mark Krueger and others, Norman testified before the U.S. Congress on the problem of institutional child abuse, on behalf of NOCCWA. It was during his term that NOCCWA invited Hillary Clinton as the first lady of Arkansas and a strong child-care advocate, to be a keynote speaker at the 1982 regional conferences in Michigan. This introduction led to discussions on the establishment of a state association in Arkansas. However, this later never materialized. The meeting with Hillary did lead to a personal invitation for the NOCCWA board to meet at then Gov. Bill Clinton's office in Little Rock. Hillary was also the keynote speaker at the Vancouver international conference in 1985. During Norman's term the current logo was adopted. He was succeeded as president by Mark Krueger.

[Editor's Note]: The following was written by Prof. Emeritus Karen Vander Ven and is found at <http://www.acycp.org/mark-krueger-fund>

"Dr. Mark Krueger, Professor of Youth Work at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee, a venerable and internationally respected and beloved practitioner, scholar, and leader in child and youth work has died. His career spanned more than 40 years and benefited not only children and youth worldwide, but also the careers of child and youth workers who were empowered by his teaching, his leadership, his numerous writings, his advocacy, and his personal caring, compassion, creativity and modesty. These qualities were infused in his numerous activities that embodied his focus on the interactive, dynamic and relational aspects of child and youth work establishing it as a crucial and unique human service. Dr. Krueger held a bachelor's degree from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and Master's and Doctoral degrees from the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. His entrance into the field of child and youth work began in the late 1960s when he served over a period of eight years as a line child and youth care worker and supervisor at the Lutheran Children's Friend Society in Milwaukee. This was followed by service as a child and youth care program coordinator and supervisor at Lakeside Children's Center also in Milwaukee."

Some events during my tenure were: Supported State, regional and local conferences and associations, such as Maryland, D. C., Virginia, and Pennsylvania. Conferences were held annually in each state. Inter-Association Child Care Conference was an annual multi-state Child Care Conference held in Valley Forge, PA. We sent letters to Congress and the US Presidents for the support of our efforts to professionalize Child Care Workers.

DAVID THOMAS, 1993-1997

When I was elected President of the National Organization of Child Care Worker Associations [NOCCWA] in 1997, I re-entered an organization in crisis. I had been involved a decade earlier, as President of the Texas Association of Child Care Workers, and then dropped out of professional activities after my divorce. Similar to so many others, for years I had sacrificed my private life to professionalization. After a period of reflection, I helped create a new Texas organization, and was sent to my first national organization meeting as a representative of the Texas group. The agenda for that meeting, it turned out, was whether to dissolve the national association. I was elected president after consultation with the woman I was dating at the time [Ann] (to whom I am still married to). Over the next couple of years, we changed that name, to the Association for Child and Youth Care Practice [ACYCP] changed its governance structure, its mission, and its operations. The goal became establishment of national certification, and I spent most of the next several years chairing the group that did that. Martha Mattingly chaired the subcommittee that created the document that listed the competencies of the professional. Karen VanderVen, Varda Mann Feder, Frank Eckles, Carole Stuart, and others were active in the process as leaders, which resulted in the first professional-level certification. After that, I was burned out, and spent the last year of my terms in office finding my replacement. During these same years, I served as Executive Director of Texas Center for Adolescent Rehabilitation and Education, a Houston treatment center, which got into financial problems. After that, I took the Executive Director position in Dallas, with Bryan's House, a program for pre-school children with special needs, in 2004. The following year I resigned from ACYCP. I served at Bryan's House until 2015, when I resigned after developing Parkinson's Disease.

When I think of my time as President, and within ACYCP, it seems so long ago and very separate than my work now. I deeply value the memories and the friendships, but alas, I am becoming more like Floyd Alwon in my growing year; "just what did we accomplish?" I can think of one singular accomplishment during my tenure at the helm and one important continuation. The accomplishment was a thorough review and update of the ACYCP; new By-Laws. Infrastructure is even less exciting in organizational discourse than it is in politics, but alas just as necessary. The review brought the by-laws into greater alignment with the work being done by ACYCP, and built a sturdier foundation on which to grow. The growth occurred during the next presidential tenure after mine, but the conversation for this growth remained alive and active during my term-mainly certification. While the conversation and even the work load began before my term and hit a great stride afterwards, we ensured that the new by-laws were ready for this new focus area of ACYCP. We were able to keep the conversation and work alive, and at least I can say that it didn't end under my term!

When I look back on my tenure as President of the Association of Child and Youth Care Practice, I recall that we were always very busy and, more importantly, very productive. I believe that my term started with the 8th International Child and Youth Care Conference in 2006, sponsored in partnership with our Canadian friends. It was a magnificent event held in the beautiful city of Montreal with, as I recall, over 1,600 participants! It was truly an international event. My term ended with the 9th International Child and Youth Care Conference in 2009 held in the paradise known as Fort Lauderdale. It was another memorable and amazing event, which was a bit hamstrung by the Great Recession. In between, we managed to create and established the Child and Youth Care Certification Board (CYCCB) as a separate professional entity. Incorporated in 2007, CYCCB continues to test and certify child and youth care professionals across the county. I am very proud of the small part I played.

I became president, after Chip Bonsutto's presidency, in 2009. We had recently launched the Child and Youth Care Certification Board (CYCCB) and the work of certification had finally come to fruition, and we need to explore what role should the ACYCP now play. Most of my tenure was focused on rebuilding the infrastructure of the organization. When I came on board, we had a hard time knowing who our members were. We had an inconsistent membership policy, and financial issues that needed to be addressed pretty quickly. I would say we were going through a re-imagining of the organization and I might characterize it as a few years of growing pains. However, we (and when I say we - I really mean we - especially Jody Rhodes) did create a membership data base and renewal process, develop and clarify membership levels and benefits, bring the support functions (i.e., contact information, phone numbers, etc.) to a central location (up to this point these functions followed the president). In addition, we updated our financial practices, moving bank accounts, and developing processes for IRS reporting, for example. All super exciting things!! I did start a second term in which we were going to focus on fine tuning a process for onboarding new board members, updating our website, and increasing outreach strategies. However, due to my personal work load issues, I did step down before my term was up, turning the organization over to Andy Schneider-Munoz, Ph.D.

As the ninth ACYCP President, we grew professional development to scale. Following in Mark Krueger's legacy we were passionately committed. ACYCP used to meet once a year and we instead decided to meet once a month. Collaborating closely with Frank Eckles, President of the Child and Youth Care Certification Board (CYCCB), we did everything we could to fully establish ACYCP [child and youth care profession] Certification. Certification grew from 50 workers to a hundred and then to many hundreds. Also working very closely with Carol Kelly and FICE USA, as well as Sister Madeleine Rybicki, we traveled to exchange learning and training on every continent of the world, and in almost every state across the country. The Journal [Journal of Child and Youth Care Work] also grew stronger as a means to share knowledge. Dale Curry, Jean Carpenter-Williams and I edited four special themed issues on international youth work, transition to independence for foster youth, child and youth care work competencies, and trauma informed care. Together ACYCP and CYCCB fulfilled a decade long dream and held a summit at the University of Pittsburgh, on child and youth care work and higher education, with 65 representatives from across the country including colleges and universities, journals, associations and other leaders preparing youth workers. Our dear colleagues Mark Krueger and Martha Mattingly passed away and I spoke with both of them in their last hours for us, to share how much we cared about them, and all they had done for the children and the workers! Their spirit lives on in our work!

TRANSITIONS

Whether you colored Easter eggs, went to church, got an Easter basket or wondered why only Christian children got them, put on new clothes, read about the "Easter Bunny", saw the movie Easter Parade, or saw the day "Easter" marked on the calendar, we all knew that sometime in April there will be many mentions of Easter. Easter is about many things, and the meanings vary from culture to culture and religion to religion, but the basic story of Easter is transition. It's about life to death; and death to life; old to new; known to mystery. It's about moving from something old and familiar to something new and undiscovered. What are known as "Spring breaks" are scheduled close to Easter, when students transition, briefly, from the discipline of school and learning, to a few days or weeks of "cutting loose".

All children in care are more familiar with transitions than they should be, and Easter - regardless of one's faith or how it is acknowledged - is a good time for people caring for children and teens to use the occasion and symbols to talk about transitions with our kids. They've already had many, and they will have many more. Transitions can be daunting, but they don't have to be feared. Talking openly about the transitions our young people have already experienced is a good way to help remove or reduce the fear.

Trains with resources and trainings offered in the YSA Learning Center; and Recognizes through awards, storytelling, and visibility campaigns YSA delivers all programs to youth, educators, community organizations, and families through our Global Youth Service Network (GYSN) partners. The GYSN is a coalition of local, state, national, and international organizations committed to engaging children and youth as leaders through volunteering, community service, service-learning, national service, and voting/civic engagement.

Through YSA's programs, youth lead community change through:

Awareness (educating others to change behaviors),

Service (using their passion, creativity, and idealism to solve problems through volunteerism),

Advocacy (to change policies and laws), and Philanthropy (generating and donating financial and in-kind support) YSA believes in the importance of impact and outcomes. The impact of YSA's work is measured in terms of scale, diversity, visibility, impact on youth, and impact on community. As part of our 2015-2020 strategic plan, YSA has set ambitious goals to substantially increase the number of young people we engage in service, the number of partner organizations we work with, the number of youth-led projects we support that lead to measurable change in communities, the number of countries in which YSA is viewed as a resource center, and our annual revenue.
